The following is a transcript of a video posted on April 4, 2016 on www.flyingbettertogether.com, a website that Alaska Airlines and Virgin America have created with information about the merger.

Hi. My name is Brad Tilden, and I'm from Alaska Airlines. This is a very exciting day, because today, we're announcing a combination of Alaska Airlines and Virgin America. Virgin America and Alaska are two great airlines that consistently deliver low fares and an outstanding customer experience. By bringing them together, we're creating the premier airline for people who live anywhere on the West Coast. As you likely know already, Virgin is a fantastic airline and they're headquartered in San Francisco. They have big operations in both SFO and LAX, and over their relatively short history, they've built a great reputation for fantastic customer service and for running a solid operation. Of course, those of you that know Alaska know that these two things are extremely important to us also. Together, the two airlines will fly to 114 destinations in four countries, and we'll be the fifth largest airline in the United States. What this acquisition really does for our customers is give you excellent utility no matter where you live on the West Coast. If you live in California, Oregon, Washington, Alaska, or even Hawaii, we are much more likely to fly to the places you want to go, and to offer you low fares and that award-winning service along the way. So bottom line, we're very excited about this combination. The team at Virgin America have built an incredible airline, and we're going to do our best to honor what they've built and to seamlessly integrate the two companies to provide an even better experience for our customers. Thank you for watching this video. I look forward to seeing many of you out and about in the next few months. And if you want to learn more about this transaction, please check out a website we've created at FlyingBetterTogether.com. Thank you very much.
